MR. DALYS TRIUMPH.

THE CELEBRATION LAST EVENING AT THE NEW

THEATRE IN LONDON. London, April 19.-A great audience witnessed the 100th performance of "Twelfth Night" at Daly's Theatre this evening. The Duke and Duchess of York, the Duke of Teck and Princess Mary of Teck and their suites occupied the royal boxes. The American Ambassador and Consul-General were also in boxes. The house was most enthusiastic, giving a treble call after each act. Satin programmes, with a superb portrait of Miss Ada Rehan as Viola, were distributed to the audience. General P. A. Collins, United States Consul-General, is to give a banquet at the Hotel Metropole on Saturday in honor of Mr. Daly, and to celebrate the run of bassador, is to preside. The Duke of Norfolk and the Marquis of Salisbury have visited Daly's Theatre within the last week, with large theatre parties. A special charity matinee of "Twelfth Night" is to be given next week under the immediate harronage of Cardinal Vaughan.

MR. DALY'S NEW-YORK CAREER. A MANAGER FOR TWENTY-FIVE YEARS-WHAT

MISS REHAN HAS DONE. However great Augustin Daly's success in London has been, it has all been earned. No manager tiously to merit the approval and gratitude of lovers of dramatic art than he. He has won public applause in what is practically the only way that it can be won-by laboring primarily for something else. His efforts have been first of all directed to the finishing and perfecting of his work itself, and this insured for it the success that it has enjoyed. Other American actors than those of Mr. Daly's company have gone to England, and have gained abundant approbation. Edwin Booth, Joseph Jefferson and Miss Mary Anderson have all found favor there, but none of them has been greeted with more marked expressions of approval and appreciation than Miss Ada Rehan and the other nembers of the Daly organization.

Mr. Daly's theatrical career in New-York was indeed a guarantee of his success in London, or wherever he should seriously try his fortune. He was born in North Carolina, and his first experience a manager. He was the dramatic editor of two or three New-York papers successively, and then he found his way into the work in which he was best qualified to make a name. This year is his twentyfifth of theatrical management and the interaction of the present company, as well as of the present New-York theatre. He began in the Flifth Avenue Theatre, where the Madison Square Theatre now stands, in Twenty-fourth-st. This was burned on January 1, 1873, and he then went to Daly's Flith Avenue Theatre, in Broadway, opposite Waverley and the brightest and ahiest authors were women. Progress was the order of the day. The conservative of one generation became the radical of the succeeding one and would so continue till the fifth of theatrical management and the fifteenth of

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence came to the theatre and gave "The Mighty Dollar," in which she played Libby Dear. The Ptorences wanted her to go with them and continue to play the part, but she declined the offer. A little later she played in Albany, under the management of John Albaugh, and it was there that she first attracted Mr. Daly's attention. She was then, of course, comparatively inexperienced, and she began with small parts in Mr. Daly's company, gradually making her way to the position which she now occupies,

Among the parts which Miss Rehan has played in the last few years are Valentine Osprey, in "The Railroad of Love"; Jo. in "The Lottery of Love" Kantippe, in "The Wife of Socrates"; Triburnia, in "Rehearsing a Tragedy", Phronie, in "Dollars and Sense", Orlana, in "The Inconstant"; Kate Verliy, in "The Squire", Dorls, in "An International Match"; Katherine, in "The Taming of the Shrew", Audier Ollimbert, in "Samson and Dellish" Match", Katherine, in "The Taming of the Shrew". Audrey Oilyphant. in "Samson and Deiliah", Niobe, in "A Night off. Flos, in "Seven-Twenty-Eight"; Tryphena Magillicuddy, in "The Goiden Widow"; Etna, in "The Great Unknown"; Rosalind, in "As You Like it"; Ponna Hypolita, in "She Would and She Wouldn't"; Peggy, in "The Country Girl"; Dina Faudelle, in "A Priceless Paragon", "Mile. Rose, in "The Prayer"; Helena, in "A Midsummer Night's Dream", Miss Hoyden, in "Miss Hoyden, in "Miss Hoyden, in "Miss Hoyden, in "Miss Hoyden's Husband". Nancy Brasher, in "Nancy & Co.", Elvira Honiton, in "New Lamps for Oild", Baroness Vera von Bouraneff, in "The Last Word", Lady Teazle, in "The School for Scanday"; Pierrot, in "The Prodigal Son"; the Princess of France, in "Love's Labor's Lost", Aprilia Dymond, in "Love in Tandem", Maid Marian, in "The Poresters", Rena Primrose, in 'Little Miss Million", mond, in "Love in Tandem"; Maid Marian, in "The Foresters", Rena Primrose, in "Little Miss Million", Juno Jessamine, in "A Test Case". Julia, in "The Hunchback", Mockwood, in "The Knave"; Leiltia Hardy, in "The Belie's Stratagem," and Viola, in "Twelfith Night."

Mr. Daly opened his new playhouse in London, on Tuesday evening, June 27, 1836, with "The Taming of the Shrew," in which Miss Rehan and Mr. Daly's company had already appeared at the Galety Theatre, in 1838, and the Lyceum Theatre, in 1839, A great and fashionable audience filed every part of the house, and in the boxes and stalls were many notable people. Miss Rehan had an enthusiastic reception on her reappearance in the part of Katharine, and Mrs. Gilbert and Mr. Lewis were welcomed as old and cherished friends. Owing to the limited term of the opening season of the new theatre, Mr. Daly decided to withdraw "The Taming of the Shrew" after its fourteenth representation, in order to present to the public his own arrangement of Sheridan Knowles's "The Hunchback," Miss Rehan appearing for the first time in London as Julia. "The Hunchback" was replaced by "Love in Tandem," a comedy adapted from the French by Mr. Daly, which ran to the close of the season. Miss Rehan spent her vacation among the Cumberland and Westmoreland lakes. On Monday evening, September 18, Mr. Daly opened his new theatre for the regular autumn and winter season with "Dollars and Sense."

Massenet's opera proved itself on the first hearing a work of importance, and one that offers much of interest to the consideration of the musical student. On account of the lack of space detailed consideration of it must be deferred, though its first production must not be allowed to pass without setting it down as a work not great, in the sense that "Carmen" and Aida" are great though one that must appeal to fine musical sensibilities through its lyric charm, its one dramatic climax and its masterly scoring.

DEBATE ON WOMAN SUFFRAGE

"TWELFTH NIGHT" A HUNDRED TIMES. THE REV. DR. HUNTINGTON THINKS MEN SHOULD DO ALL THE VOTING.

AN INTERESTING MEETING AT THE HOME OF

MRS. EDWARD CURTIS-MRS. CHARLES

A. RUNKLE'S EARNEST PLEA. A meeting to discuss the question of woman suffrage was held at the home of Mrs. Edward Curtis. No. 27 Washington Place, yesterday evening. It was under the auspices of a volunteer committee of prominent women, of which Mrs. Henry M. Sanders, wife of the Rev. Dr. Sanders, of No. 43 Fifth-ave. is chairman. There were about one hundred and twenty-five representative women in the spacious parlors and hallway, and the liveliest interest was manifested throughout the proceedings. Mrs. Curtis Twelfth Night." Mr. Bayard, the American Am- presided, and in calling the meeting to order briefly stated its object. The opening address was an eloquent argument in favor of woman suffrage by a young society woman whose modesty led her to withhold her name from publication.

The Rev. Dr. William R. Huntington, rector of Grace Protestant Episcopal Church, Broadway, near Tenth-st., then took the floor against woman suffrage. In opening his address he said that, standing there in a room on the walls of which hung a large and handsome portrait of George William Curtis, and in his old home, it almost seemed sacrilegious for one to speak against a principle which he had so eloquently and beautifully up-held, but the speaker believed that were Mr. Curtis present his liberal and tolerant spirit would lead him to say that all men must be allowed to speak what they believed to be the truth. Dr. Huntington then said in substance that he was opposed to the extension of parliamentary suffrage to woman because he thought it would have a demoralizing tendency. Its advocacy special mission. Woman suffrage would tend to create litical preferment and to stir up strife He quoted, as opposed to woman suffrage, Horace Bushnell, Francis Parker and Mrs. Humphry Ward, whom he characterized as one of the ablest women of the present time and singularly free from sus-picion of being under ecclesiastical control.

CONSERVATIVES BECOMING RADICALS.

Mrs. Charles A. Runkle replied to Dr. Huntington's argument point by point, saying, at the outset, that she had come prepared to make an quent" speech, but would put it aside in order to confute his allegations, which she denied, upon line." She declared that had Bushnell lived to-day he would undoubtedly have changed his views, and took strong ground against any and all Avenue Theatre, in Broadway, opposite Waverley Place, From here he moved to the present Fifth Avenue Theatre, at Broadway and Twenty-eighth-st. In this period his company included such actors as Miss Clara Morris, Miss Fanny Davenport, Charles Fisher, William Davidge, Mrs. Glibert and Miss Sarah Jewett. He managed the Olympic Miss Ada Rehan first appeared in the company. Miss Rehan had made her first attempts on the stage with Bernard Macauley's company in Louis-wille. She first attracted marked attention when Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Florence came to the theatre.

LESSONS FROM PERICLES'S TIME.

The Rev. Dr. Huntington said he thought that 'fraternity" should precede "liberty" and "equality." He referred to the condition of women in the time of Pericles, when certain of them were highly educated, and yet immorality existed among them, in spite of their high intellectual culture.

Mrs. Runkle replied that the immorality referred to existed only because the women had no voice in the tribunal of pubble affairs. She again dented that the extension of suffrage to women would tend to stir up strife in families. There were many homes to-day, she said, in which there existed differences of religious, political and social opinions, and yet they were homes of love, harmony and happiness, and trefutably proved that differences of opinion among individual members of families did not necessarily, by any means, cause family dissension. time of Pericles, when certain of them were highly

Dr. Huntington said there was, undoubtedly, great danger that the extension of suffrage to women would not only lead to unseemly strife among them for public office, but that it would also tend to lessen the number of marriages, which would be a Uniontown, Penn., April 19.—After scouring the country over. Sheriff Wilhelm succeeded in getting twenty deputies, and this morning they were marched to the plant of the Oliver Company and posted about the grounds. One hundred ovens were fired by this company this morning and 100 men were at work to-day, George T. Oliver, of Pittsburg, came to town yesterday and proposed that the men so to work at the rate pall by the Oliver Company before the strike. Many of the men agreed to the proposition, but the Huns held a meeting and passed resolutions cautioning them not to resums work, under a penalty of being beaten by a mob. There are 400 foreigners at this plant and nearly an are determined to stay out.

Huntingion, Penn., April 19.—The miners in the Huntingion and Broad Top district have finally decided on a general sirike on Saturday morning, provided the miners in the Cumberland district, act upon the recent order of the United Mine Workers Association. Advices from Cumberland estimate the number of miners in that region who will go out at 100. The 300 miners in the East Broad Top region will join in the strike.

MR. SMALLEY AND "MARCELLA."

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: May I venture to take issue in your columns with one point made by Mr. Smalley in his interesting study of Mrs. Humphry Ward and her 'poaching tragedy," that Mrs. Ward, in violation of the facts in a case from which he supposes her to have drawn this incident, makes Westall, the gamekeeper, attack Hurd, the poacher, "In reality it was the poacher who attacked the gamekeeper, and the killing was as much murder as If no pheasant had been preserved." Mr. Smalley's seriousness impresses one as being almost as amusing as Mrs. Ward's own. sympathy for the murderer and of appeal for sympathy to the reader seems a singular misinterpreta-

So far as the Forty-eighth Election District of the XXVIIth Assembly District is concerned, the for to-night. A meeting of the enrolled members was called, and the inclosed ticket was nominated unanimously. The members were informed that any person had the right to make a nomination, and nominations were asked for.

Last fall the XXVIIII Assembly District was the only one in the city that voted to adopt the district organization plan, and it resulted in the complete overthrow of the former bosses and their system of running the district. A new set of officers was elected, pledged to the district system, and the system has been carried out this spring, and the system has been carried out this spring, and the delegates to be elected to the Assembly District Convention will be of a class that will not tolerate bosses.

CLOTHING BADLY NEEDED FOR THE POOR.

To be Editor of The Tribune.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: This society is greatly in need at the present

Sir: This society is greatly in need at the present time of everything in the way of boys' clothing. The drains made upon it by the unusually large number of children now being rescued from the slums of this city have exhausted its supplies, and since the newspapers have stopped collecting garments for this purpose the society is compelled to apply to the public in literally adding it to "clothe the naked." It is hoped that this appeal will receive a prompt response from charitable people in behalf of the suffering little children of this great city.

President of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

New-York, April 16, 1894. Cruelty to Children. New-York, April 16, 1894.

To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: I would like to avail myself of the opportunity afforded by The Tribune to say to the women of New-York who are now taking decisive action in regard to woman suffrage that there are women in other States who are in cordial sympathy with them in their work, watching the movement with the keenest interest, and arriently longing to lend to-o-operative aid to a cause which will promote justice and establish higher ethical principles.

OBITUARY.

HORACE J. POINIER.

Horace J. Poinier, a venerable citizen of Newark, died at the house of his zon, William K. Poinier, No. 67 Thomas-st., Newark, yesterday, aged eighty-Cambridge, Mass., April 19 (Special).—The first performance of the Latin play, the "Phormio" four. Death was due to old age, and was hastened by an attack of hiccoughs which came on two weeks of Terence, was given to-night. It was an unqualiago. Mr. Poinier was married a second time in the fall of 1822 the bride being Miss Anna Force, a teacher in the grammar department of the Washington Public School. The marriage occurred in this city, and was not known for some time. The age of the bride was about forty years. The first ington Public School. The marriage occurred in this city, and was not known for some time. The age of the bride was about forty years. The first wife, by whom he had two sons, died many years ago. The two sons and the second wife survive him. Mr. Poinier was born in Newark in 1819. He was the descendant of a French Huguenot family that settled in White Plains in the eighteenth century. In 1780 bis father moved to Newark and engaged in the lumber business, and when the son attained manhood he was taken into the business, afterward starting on his own account. He was shrewd and energetic, and was successful. In 1843 he was elected to the Common Council, and was re-elected in 1844. In the fall of 1854 he was nominated for Mayor on the Whig ticket and was elected, and was re-elected the following year and again in 1856, serving three terms. He was strongly supported by the law-and-order element, which he had won by a strict enforcement of the laws. During the sixtles he served on the Board of Freeholders. When the Republican party was organized he became one of its most zealous members, and continued one until the day of his death. He was one of the corporators of the Howard Savings Bank and a director of the Newark Library Association, Newark City National Bank, trustee of the Foster Home, and member of the New-Jersey Historical Society. In religion he was a devout Presbyterian.

distinction. His first business venture was as a grocer in Pittsburg, and after achieving success in this branch of trade he organized the Rochester Tumbler Company at Rochester, Penn., which at one time was the largest tumbler-manufacturing company in the world.

Mr. Lippincott removed to New-York City in 18%, still conducting large business interests. In 1887 he became interested in the phonograph invented by Thomas Edison, and purchased the exclusive right for North America, paying Mr. Edison therefor the sum of $1,600,000, but the practicability of the phonograph as a business venture failed to win general support and disaster overtook him. Mr. Lippincott became paralyzed from overwork in October, 1890, and had never recovered or attended to any business since. He was a member of the Fifth Avenue Baptiet Church of New-York, and recently joined the First Baptist Church in Newton Centre, where he had lived for the last three years. He leaves a widow, a daughter and two sons.
